Course

EDU 644 - Teaching Diverse Learners

This course focuses on the variety of diverse learners in today's classrooms. Students will examine how concepts of culture, cultural competency, inclusion, and equity intersect in educational settings. In addition, they will develop a basic understanding of the special education major categories of exceptionalities; as well as the educational, legal, and social issues surrounding disability and special education. Developing an awareness of marginalized populations will enable the students to provide responsive instruction for all students.
