Course

FIN 440 - International Finance

This course explores the principles and practices of international financial management with emphasis on global financial markets, exchange rate systems, and cross-border capital flows. Students examine how multinational corporations, investors, and governments interact within the international monetary environment. Topics include currency markets, foreign exchange risk management, international banking, trade finance, and global investment strategies. Through applied exercises and regional market explorations, students gain practical insight into the opportunities and challenges of operating in the global financial system while identifying potential career paths in international finance, banking, and economic policy.
